AUT CENTRE FOR PERSON CENTRED RESEARCH

Kia ora. You are invited to take part in research aiming to explore your perspectives on the things that help people to build their personal resources for living with long term neurological impairment

What would we like to do?
We would like to interview:

- people and whānau experiencing age-related neurological impairment such as Stroke, Parkinson's, Mild Cognitive Impairment and Dementia; and
- health professionals who work with these people

About their experiences of living or working with age-related neurological impairment and the people and environments they think help people to thrive.

Why are we doing this research?
We know that living with long term neurological impairment can be challenging. We also know that the people and organisations that work with people and whānau experiencing neurological impairment can help to build their confidence and ability to manage these challenges. We would like to better understand how and under what circumstances this happens so that we can improve how we work with people and the services we offer them in the future.
